Emergency Exemption: Issuance

On August 21, 1997, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (Service) issued a permit (PRT-833379) to the Buffalo Zoo (Zoo), Buffalo, New York to export a female gorilla (Gorilla gorilla) to the Granby Zoo in Granby, Quebec, Canada. The 30-day public comment period required by section 10(c) of the Endangered Species Act was waived. The Service determined that an emergency affecting the health and life of the gorilla existed and that no reasonable alternative was available to the applicant, for the following reasons:

a. The Buffalo Zoo applied for an export permit for the female gorilla who is suddenly not compatible with the gorilla social groups at the Zoo. The Zoo has only one gorilla facility with three social groups. Although she would like to be with the primary male, she has been rejected by the other females who have attained a higher status than she. She has taken her ostracism poorly and will not fit in with the other two groups. She has caused injuries to the other animals in all three groups.

b. The Zoo is currently confining her to one of the four holding areas available. Because of the facility's configuration, she is still in close proximity to the other animals. This proximity is harming her psychologically; she is no longer eating, and is suffering physically.

c. The Granby Zoo, which had loaned this gorilla to the Buffalo Zoo, has offered to have her return.

Dated: August 29, 1997.

Acting Chief, Branch of Permits, Office of Management Authority.
